To terse business facts, no dross, no chaff, no long and wordy lingo—just enough to make our talk plain

Our knowledge of merchandise, combined with some one else's knowledge of tailoring, has produced some Overcoats for you that you will be proud to own and wear.

Stylish, Long Overcoats, the sort that enthusiastic young men so delight in, are $8. You'll see $10 marked on the same grade of coat in most of the stores.

Black and Blue Kersey, Black Cheviot and Fine Clay Diagonal Overcoats for $10 are the best for the money in America.

Soft and Fine Kersey Overcoats, skirt lined with fine Clay, shoulder and sleeves lined with good silk, for $12.

How do you think our $15 $18 and $20 Overcoats must be? Better look through that Overcoat Room of Ours.

A single Tax Man, talking to a crowd of men, last night at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, said that he could buy goods cheaper on Forty-second street, New York, than he could right here in Wilmington.

He might know a whole lot about land, but we don't think he knows much about merchandise, at least not of Clothing. It wouldn't have taken more than a dozen yards from where he was talking to convince him or any of his hearers that the New York Clothing House sell Clothing lower than any concern either in New York or elsewhere. And we believe you can buy your Dry Goods, Shoes and other wearables cheaper in Wilmington than in any other city.

This House

...To Let

HEY put me in—the House Agency did—to take care of the house," said old Mrs. Pounce, nodding her orange colored cap strings.

"You seem like a respectable person, Mrs. Pounce, that has seen better days," was what the house agent said, when he handed me over the keys, "and," says he, "I think we may trust you to take good care of our out door-steps and windows, show applicants over the house and answer all questions."

"You may say so, sir," says I, with a courtesy, "there's many houses I've had charge of and never a fault has been found yet. And this shan't be the first one," says I.

"We've a large business," says Mr. Eagle, "and if you give satisfaction, Mrs. Pounce," says he, as civil spoken as possible, "it's likely you'll never be without a roof to your head."

Well, my dear, of all nice houses—and I've seen a many in my day—this was the nicest. Brown stone front, with a bay window and snug garden planted all in box borders, hot and cold water all through, a little conservatory with an arched glass roof at the rear, and the hall floor covered with real Milton tiles, and made you think was walking on pictures; wall painted with Cupids and Venuses and garlands of flowers, the dados of hard wood all throughout. Neighborhood most desirable, drainage and sewerage perfect, and churches conveniently near.

Excuse me my dear, if it sounds like an advertisement, but Mr. Eagle wrote it down for me, and I never rested until I'd committed it all to memory, so I could speak it off easy like, without any stops or hitches. And this I will say, as can't be said of all advertisements, there wasn't a word in the agent's description but what the house bore out.

And the board hadn't been up twenty-four hours before there was a rush to look at the house. Young married couples as wanted to give up apartments, old married folks as wasn't suited with their location; boarding-house keepers as made believe they were private families as wanted to take a few select boarders. But the rent was put up tolerably high and most of 'em dropped off, after I'd named the sum.

"Never mind Mrs. Pounce, never mind," says Mr. Eagle, rubbing his hands. "It's a house that they'll be no difficulty in letting, without any reduction of rent. Just wait," says he, "till the spring sets in."

But, one day in trot and old gentleman with gold spectacles and a smooth shaven face, and "business" writ in every wrinkle of his forehead.

"This house to let ma'am?" says he.

"Yes, sir," says I.

"Can I look at it?" says he.

"Certainly, sir," says I.

I began as smooth as oil about the hot and cold water, the marble floored bath-room, and the Milton tiles, when all of a sudden he puts up two hands in a warning sort of way.

"That'll do, ma'am," says he, "that'll do. I've eyes, and I can see for myself."

"Certainly, sir," says I; but I won't deny as I was took aback by that queer dictatorial way of his.

"Any ghosts about the place ma'am?" says he.

"Sir?" says I.

"Ghosts," says he, out loud and sharp. "Mysterious footsteps—lurking shadows—clanking chains at midnight?"

"Mercy, no, sir!" says I, beginning to feel my flesh creep all over.

"Rats?" says he.

"Certainly not," says I, "with solid cemented cellar floor and sealed boards."

"Bettles?" says he.

"Look for yourself, sir," says I, bridling up a little.

"I like the house," says he, after he had gone sniffing about the drain pipes, and peered into the coal cellar and wine vault and sounded the copper boiler with his knuckles, just for all the world as if he was in the plumbing business. "You may tell the agent I'll take it, if he and I can come to terms about the rent. When shall you see him?"

"Most likely this afternoon, sir," says I.

"I'll drop in at his office to-morrow at nine," says he. "I'm going to be married," says he, as composed as if he were saying that he was going to take a blue pill.

"The house will suit my wife's ideas. She thinks we are going to board," says he, with an odd sort of chuckle in his throat. "and she's not a bit pleased with the idea. It'll be a pleasant surprise for her," says he.

Well, no sooner had he gone than I comes a stout, middle-aged lady, in a black silk dress, rows of curls on either side of her face, and cheeks as red as any cabbage rose.

"I've just come from Mr. Eagle's office," says she. "He has given me the refusal of the house, in case it suits me."

"I don't know, ma'am," says I, "but what it's let already."

"Let already?" says she, with a sort of scream. "But that's impossible!"

Don't Tell I've the refusal of it?

Show me the premises at once."

Well, I was in a pretty puzzle, as you may believe; but I went all over the house with the curly lady, and she declared it met her fancy exactly.

"Possession on the first of May, I suppose?" says she.

"Yes, ma'am," said I. "If—"

"There's no 'if' in the question," says she, as short as pie crust. "You may take down the 'To Let,' my good woman."

I curtsied very low, but I say to myself, "Not if I know it, ma'am, without orders from the agent himself."

Away went the lady with the curly hair and rose-red cheeks, and I was just putting on my hat to run round to the House Agency, when in comes Mr. Eagle himself, all smiles.

Well, Mrs. Pounce," says he, "so the house is let?"

"To my thinking, sir," this is very perplexing. At what time was this personage here?"

"The clock struck twelve, sir," says I, "just as he went away."

Mr. Eagle hit himself a blow over the forehead like a play-actor.

"Confusion worse confounded!" says he. "It was twelve precisely when my customer, left the office. We can't split the house in two, can we? Well, we must tell your old gentleman just how it happened. I dare say he will be reasonable about it."

But he wasn't reasonable. Mr. Eagle told me afterward; he never saw any one in such a rage.

"I've taken the house," says he, "and I'll have it, cost what it may. Do you say that the rent was two hundred pounds?" I'll give you two hundred and fifty down; if my claim and that of this lady are equally good, the question of price must settle it."

Well we supposed, me and Mr. Eagle, as that was the end of the matter. But not a bit of it. The lady came that same afternoon, with an upholsterer and tape-measure to see about the carpets.

"Two hundred and fifty pounds, indeed!" says she, with a toss of her curls. "It will take more than a paltry two hundred pounds to unsettle my plans. I'll give three hundred sooner than I'll lose the house."

When my old gentleman hears this, he grinds his teeth in a manner as was fearful to hear.

"It's my house," says he, "and I will have it! Three hundred and fifty pounds, Eagle!"

"Come," says Mr. Eagle, "matters are getting lively. Real estate is looking up in the market."

But you should have heard what a whistle he gave when I told him, the next day, that the curly lady had authorized me to offer four hundred.

"I'll not stand this any longer," says Mr. Eagle, jumping up and sending the papers flying all over the office table. "I've a conscience, if Fa e has made a real estate agent of me. Tell her to come around this afternoon and sign the lease. Four hundred pounds is twice what we asked, and we asked all the property was worth to begin with."

So the curly lady had her own way, after all. The bald-headed old gentleman stamped about in a pretty rage when he heard as the house was let.

"I'll sue the agency," says he. "I'll have the house if it costs me all I'm worth."

"Oh, hush, sir!" says I, all in a tremble. "Here comes Miss Wix now."

"Who?" says he.

"Miss Wix," says I. The lady who has taken the house."

I got behind the door, fully expecting a scene, after what had come and gone. But to my surprise, she gave a little shriek and flew into his arms.

"Dear Josiah!" says she.

"Dearest Barbara!" says he.

"How on earth came you here?" says she.

"I was looking for a desirable residence for you, my own angel," says he.

"You duck!" says she.

"And I thought this would exactly suit you," says he.

"Oh," says she, "it does, and I've taken it at four hundred pounds a year. It seems a good deal of money to pay, but I've been driven to it by a horrid old cormorant who was determined to have the house at any price. However—"

"Barbara," says the old gentleman, with a little gasping sound in his throat, as if he was swallowing a lump, "that horrid old cormorant was I!"

"You don't mean—" says she.

"That we have been bidding a gainst each other," says the old gentleman. "Yes, we have."

"And I was going to give you a pleasant surprise."

So that settled matters. They were married in a month, and they came there to live. Of all my experience in house-letting this beat everything, and so everybody says as hears the story.

At Sunset.

It isn't the thing you do, dear, it's the thing you've left undone, which gives you a bit of heartache

At the setting of the sun. The tender word forgotten, The letter you did not write, The flower you might have sent, dear, Are your haunting ghosts to-night.

The stone you might have lifted Out of a brother's way, The bit of heartsome counsel You were hurried too much to say, The loving touch of the hand, dear, The gentle and winsome tone That you had no time or thought for With troublesome none of your own.

The little act of kindness, So easily out of mind, Those chances to be angels Which every mortal finds, Each echo, reproachful wail, When hope is faint and flagging, And a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear, And sorrow is all too great, To suffer our slow compassion That tarries until too late, And it's not the thing you do, dear, It's the thing you leave undone, Which gives you a bit of heartache At the setting of the sun.

The Boy at School.

Maude Murray, in writing recently of the relation of mother to son, concludes by a good bit of advice. The youth must remember that the world will accept him at his own estimate only if he lives up to it, she says. He may take any place in the world which he feels he has the ability to fill, and no one will dispute his right if he fills it acceptably. He is not valuable unless he makes himself so. It is useless to worry about what others think of him. His estimate of himself will set the standard for others. When a new boy enters school the other boys seem to know instinctively what gauge to put upon his ability and courage. Naturally he must carry in his face and manner his true worth, to be so quickly judged. A new boy may pretend for a day, perhaps, but his pretensions do not long deceive any one. If the boy is a hero, he need not tell it; the fact shows in the glance of his eye the carriage of his head, the glow of his face.

The mother has doubtless impressed upon her son's mind long before this the importance of being strictly honest, but now, as he enters the business world, she must again warn him of the misery which a lack of perfect honesty entails. A man may be very dishonest and yet keep out of the law's reach, for many things may be legal which are not strictly honest. It appears to be the policy of some men to go as far as possible within the limit of the law, and it is certainly a little discouraging to an honest man to see that his dishonest neighbor is so successful—using the word in the worldly sense as relating to money making.

A business man cannot afford to be hasty in temper; every feeling, every thought and action has its bearing on the temper, and it is constantly being made better or worse. It is fortunate if one can always overcome the tendency to give away to such feeling. It has been wisely said: "Never give away to what is little, or by that little, however you may despise it, you will be practically governed."

The youth must learn to rely upon himself. It will weaken him if he sits idly and expects to gain an end through the influence of some friend or relative. If he can have such assistance, all well and good, but let him not wait for it. Self-help is the foundation for all expectations. Those having most experience in charitable work know that the true way to help the needy is to give them work. Almsgiving almost invariably leads to idleness.

The value of time must be appreciated by a youth who hopes to make a successful business man. On the dial of All Soul's Church, Oxford, is inscribed these solemn words: "The hours perish and are laid to our charge. Lost time can not be recalled and every moment of it should be spent to advantage in some way. If a boy wastes his own time, he has no right to break in upon that of another. Only great workers realize how much can be accomplished in 'odd moments.'"

Let not the youth become alarmed when we say the successful business man must be industrious, patient, honest, truthful, temperate, prompt, self-respecting, persevering, conscientious, polite, neat in dress, God-fearing and law-abiding. With such traits, there can be no failure. Yes, we have succeeded in acquiring wealth who did not possess all these traits, but other and greater things were denied them.

As a last word, let the boy be self-reliant. "Insist on yourself, never imitate," says Ruskin. "Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation; but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous, half possession. That which each can do best, none but his Maker can teach him. No man yet knows what it is, nor can, till that person has exhibited it. Do that which is assigned thee, and 'thou shalt not hope too much or dare to much.'"

Washington

.....Letter

FTER mature consideration Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet have arrived at the wonderful conclusion that the overwhelming Democratic defeat of last week were endorsements of the administration and condemnation of the anti-Cleveland Democrats. Was anything more idiotic ever conceived outside of the walls of an insane asylum? It is egotism run wild. These self-blinded individuals will never realize the disgust the people of this country feel for their demonstrated incapacity until the election returns of next November are counted; then they will have the remainder of their lives to learn to see themselves as others see them.

Gorman, Hill, and other anti-Cleveland Democrats are going, unless their friends in Washington are misinformed as to their intentions, to give Mr. Cleveland another chance to see whether his personal following is as large as he thinks it is, by helping to nominate him for president again. They charge him with having made it impossible to elect any Democrat president, and say that he shall bear the ignominy of being the only man who was ever twice defeated for the Presidency of the United States. That will suit the Republicans, as they would rather defeat Mr. Cleveland than anybody else.

The Republicans are naturally delighted at the prospect of not only regaining the Presidency next year, but of having control of both branches of Congress, a majority of the Senate after March 4, 1897, having been made absolutely certain by the result of last week's elections. Nothing but some stupendous blunder on the part of the Republican majority in the House at the coming session of Congress can prevent Republican success next year, and with that man of iron will and proved sagacity, Thomas B. Reed, in the Speaker's chair, no such blunder will be made. This is so well known by the Democrats that they are now depending solely upon their ability to create jealousy among the victorious Republicans. A Democratic plan has already been agreed upon, which involves concocting and spreading of all sorts of stories calculated to cause bickering and dissension among the friends of the aspirants for Republican presidential nomination, and already those stories are being circulated. Let all Republicans keep in mind the sources and purposes of these tales, and they will cause no harm, and it is proposed to take part in a total block look at the present condition of the Democratic party and be wiser in time.

Ex-Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, who is in Washington in connection with the sugar bounty cases in which he is chief counsel, says: "The Republicans are in a position where they can take any man for a presidential candidate. They do not have to figure on the changes of this or that man for election. Their candidate will be elected no matter who he is nor what state he comes from."

The administration is understood to be considerably troubled about the Cuban question and several members of the cabinet, having in view the failure of Mr. Cleveland's Hawaiian policy, are trying to persuade him to make no recommendation on the Cuban matter in his message to Congress, further than to call attention to the information (sending the documents with the message) gathered by the State Department, and to request that Congress shall define the policy to be pursued by this government. If he accepts that advice it will indicate that he has learned something by experience, but he will have to do it before most people will believe it possible.

How are the mighty fallen! E. Ellery Anderson, of New York, one of the original cuckoos, has been officially snubbed by Hoke Smith, one of the second crop of cuckoos. Mr. Anderson is one of the men appointed by Mr. Cleveland to look out for the interests of the government in the Union Pacific Railroad. Quite awhile ago he made some recommendation to Secretary Hoke Smith, concerning the patenting of lands to that railroad company by the U. S. Land Office. Not hearing anything about his recommendation, Mr. Anderson ventured to remind the Secretary of them and to ask that he say what he intended doing about them. He was curtly informed that the Secretary did not deem it advisable to pass on the recommendation either way, as Congress would probably legislate on the subject at the coming session. It was probably this snubbing of a Cleveland worshipper that was responsible for the rumor that Mr. Smith was contemplating an early retirement from the cabinet. He isn't doing anything of the sort; he is enjoying his prominence to the full and is using it to help along his ambition to succeed Gen. Gordon as Senator from Georgia. If he can get that vacancy in the Supreme Court he will gladly take it, otherwise he'll stick to his present job.

The Republican party might have lots worse candidates than Senator Quay would make and then not have a bad one, but Senator Quay has no idea of becoming a candidate next year, notwithstanding Democratic stories to the contrary.

TO ADVERTISERS.
In justice to ourselves and to you we wish to state that the circulation of the TRANSCRIPT is over 1,200 copies weekly and has been for the past five months. We believe this to be at least 25 per cent. greater than any other country weekly in the county. This statement is made merely to correct an erroneous impression which obtains in certain quarters.

WHO WOULD BELIEVE IT?

"Just at the time the solid South was mangled by the Republican vote the solid North also received a severe contusion. Mr. James Campbell Matthews, a colored lawyer in Albany, N. Y., was elected Recorder in that city by the Democrats. He defeated his competitor, a white man and a Republican, by 2000 majority. Mr. Matthews, by virtue of his office is entitled to sit in the Court of Special Sessions and to call out the militia when necessary to suppress civil disorder. Never before has a colored citizen received such substantial honor at the hands of fellow-citizens in any Northern State. Mr. Matthews was elected by President Cleveland, in 1885, for Recorder of Deeds at Washington, but his nomination was rejected by the Senate. His election to a more important office is popular vote is a much greater feather in his cap, and doubtless will be a source of gratification to his colored compatriots in all parts of the country."—Philadelphia Record Nov. 15th.

"Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph."
Oh! How could the Record, that faithful Democratic paper, publish such a cruel fact—the election of a negro by the Democrats in the Democratic city of Albany to be a judge, to sit upon the bench as his office entitles him! Why should not such a calamity (in the eyes of the White Man's Party) be suppressed? If this man Matthews had been elected by the Republicans not a Democratic paper in Delaware or Maryland but would have proclaimed the fact to the world as an evidence of the "love of Republicans for the nigger, a pledge for mixed schools." Matthews is black but he is smart and unscrupulous. President Cleveland nominated him for Recorder of Deeds in Washington in 1885, the best office in the District of Columbia, but the Senate turned him down because of his character. Cleveland nominated another negro for the same office who was accepted by the Senate and at the beginning of his last Administration he did the same thing, selected a negro who was removed because of his indecent proposals to his white lady clerks. Every intelligent editor of a Democratic paper should be ashamed in view of these facts in the future to refer to a White Man's Party. The fact is the last Democratic Governor in this State, Robert J. Reynolds, was elected by negro votes, votes solicited and paid for by Democratic politicians. Let nothing more be said of the "Negro Party."

The TRANSCRIPT has said before that the best interests of the south demand a division of the colored vote. That being done the south is for protection and it will naturally turn to the Republican Party, the party that believes in America for Americans and the protection of home industries. Let the negro be protected in all his rights, educate him, encourage him to labor and to save part of his earnings, in short to make a good citizen of him, but let him not be the balance of power between parties by corrupt influences. Let the negro be educated not corrupted that he may become a better citizen. The south must have the labor of the colored race, the country is nothing without it and it is not only practicing humanity and Christianity towards the negro to treat him well but the economy and prosperity of the south demands it.

But we have gotten away from our text. Who would believe that the Democratic Party would elect a negro to one of the best offices in the city of Albany, the capital of the Empire State, the seat of northern Democracy? Certainly the "sun do move." It is strange the Democratic papers have not heard of this. It is true, however, because the Record said so. What think ye of it, ye men who have stood by the so-called White Man's Party? Is it any wonder that Republicans laugh at you? "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon," for verily in this victory is the arrest defeat to Democracy.

THE Democratic editors are amusing. The Index says this week the Democrats in Maryland, New York and Kentucky have rebelled against boss rule and it calls upon Delaware Republicans to do the same, when the Republicans are not in power in the State. It weeps Crocodile tears over Kent county and says the Republican Party there "is working to-day for no definite aim except the advancement of one man." Name him. Who is he? Why beat around in the dark? Name him. Is he the man who contributed to the Democratic campaign fund through ex-Chancellor Wolcott because it might do him good personally? Is he the man? Only a few months ago this man was a good fellow, a "substantial" contributor to the Index. Verily! No one the man.

DEMOCRATIC CONSOLATION.

Our friends the enemy are abstracting consolation from the recent elections. Of course it is like the good one gets from quinine, it leaves a very disagreeable taste in the mouth, but still we are glad to see them find some consolation after the dose has been taken. President Cleveland is said to be smiling secretly and serenely at the defeat of Gorman, Brice, Hill, Blackburn, Smith, & Co., who opposed his tariff reform ideas, while these political sages look upon the battle of the ballots, and see the death knell of the "third term" in the vote of November 5th.

A comparison of that vote with the vote of 1891, just previous to the last Presidential election and the votes since that election and the passage of the Democratic reform tariff, is interesting. Here it is by majorities, the Democratic majorities being marked by an X:

	1891	1893	1894	1895
Mass.....	4,677	35,997	65,387	64,776
N. Y.....	47,935	24,484	156,108	97,169
N. J.....	13,609	28,829	48,478	25,899
Penn.....	58,152	133,140	241,307	174,247
Md.....	30,151	210,225	2,096	19,016
Ohio.....	21,511	80,995	137,087	95,348
Ky.....	29,081	22,551	17,390	17,390
Pa.....	7,816	210	73,888	64,163
Neb.....	4,136	6,966	23,202	10,900
Ka.....			37,794	40,000

This is a picture of "before and after" taking the Democratic Reform tariff and the present administrations. It seems to have played havoc with the Democratic majorities. The vote of November 5th last shows the following increase in the Republican majorities over the vote of four years ago, wiping out as the X indicates in many instances large Democratic majorities:

New York increase majority.....	145,104
Pennsylvania.....	116,093
Ohio.....	73,837
Massachusetts.....	71,243
Iowa.....	56,347
Kentucky.....	45,851
Maryland.....	49,107
New Jersey.....	39,007
Nebraska.....	14,630

It is said that "hope springs eternal in the human breast" and we are glad of it, and rejoice that our Democratic friends can find any consolation in these figures. To the average mind they point unmistakably to a Republican President next year and to a return of the good times under the protective policy of the G. O. P. President Cleveland during his first term had not the opportunity to show what was in him or his party. He operated under Republican laws and always had a Republican Senate to hold him in check, but by the cry of "robber tariff," "down with the corporations," and "making the rich richer and the poor poorer" the people were seduced three years ago, and a sorry three years they have been. President Cleveland has had the opportunity to show what he can do and the people have spoken three times since, in 1893, in 1894, in 1895. The above figures indicate how they have spoken. They will speak again in 1896 and if our Democratic friends can extract any consolation from the above figures in anticipation of what the people will say, we are glad of it. There is happiness enough for us in the result they foreshadow, and may the coming candidate be Thos. B. Reed, the biggest man in the country to-day.

ARE YOU CONTENT?

"The Levy Court yesterday passed a resolution allowing the special constables one day's pay, and we have no doubt the brainy editor of the TRANSCRIPT is content. ***** The Court, to a man, expressed itself as being opposed to paying the men, but felt bound to follow the law. ***** It is safe to say no more special constables * * * will hereafter be seen at the polls in Delaware."—New Era.

"The brainy editor of the TRANSCRIPT is not content because this is an unjust burden placed upon the people." The New Era, which said not a word against the payment of this money while it was being considered by the Levy Court, presumes that we are "content" because the payment is five dollars to each man rather than fifteen, the original claim, and the amount paid to the last special constables. But we are not. It is legal robbery to bribe a few men to vote the Democratic ticket. That is a harsh sentence but it is true. Nor was there justification for the payment in law. The law expressly says the appointment must be upon petition of fifty citizens. There is no evidence except the word of Robert J. Reynolds that such a petition ever had an existence, and Mr. Reynolds' word is worth nothing politically. Hundreds of Democrats can testify to that fact. The members of the Levy Court had no warrants for voting away the people's money and they knowing it, held the meeting at which the matter was considered behind closed doors. Why should the public be shut out when the people's money is being voted away? It won't do. The Democratic Party was responsible for the appointment of the special constables and it has made itself responsible for the payment of them.

The New Era is misleading, as usual, in its statements. It says "the Court felt bound to follow the law," whatever that may mean. The supposition is that the Court, "to a man," voted for the payment of the special constables. That is the inference from the New Era article. But it is not true. The two Republican members of that Levy Court voted against the payment and protested that it was wrong. The three Democratic members took the responsibility and the burden upon themselves, and upon the Democratic Party rests the shame of this misuse of the public money.

The New Era states a half truth when it says "no more special constables for Delaware." The repeal of that obnoxious law is due to the Republicans. They repealed it with a Republican Governor in the chair, not because they feared he would misuse it but because from principle they are opposed to partisan laws.

But we wish to ask the New Era if it is content with the payment of five dollars to each of the special constables, five or six thousand dollars of the hard earned money of the taxpayers of New Castle county? Are you content? And the taxpayers, are you content? Let not party enter into the matter at all, but answer the question from a taxpayers standpoint. Do you approve of the acts of a partisan Levy Court, for had these men been Republicans they would not have been paid? Are you content?

IS IT "ADDICKS OR NOBODY?"

It is reported that J. Edward Addicks has purchased the State Sentinel at Dover and that George W. Roberts of the Morning News staff is to become editor. Mr. Roberts has been credited with writing the Addicks articles that have appeared in that paper for the past month or two. This means a continuation of the political warfare in the Republican Party of "Addicks or nobody." It means that the man who controlled four votes in the last General Assembly to prevent the election of any Republican save Addicks and then conspired with the Democrats to prevent an election at all, has been persuaded, easily persuaded, we have no doubt, to believe that he can control the primaries in Kent and Sussex counties, by purchase if not otherwise, and that having nominated the ticket, he can purchase the election. We do not believe he can do any of these things but he can be given that encouragement by Republicans in Kent and Sussex that will disrupt and defeat the party there. Certainly Addicksism in any part of the State ticket next fall means the defeat of the Republicans in New Castle county. New Castle Republicans look upon him as a political traitor and they will never touch him.

No power, no force, no arguments would change their opinions of Mr. Addicks and his methods. The question is, will the Republicans of Kent and Sussex counties suffer Mr. Addicks to so control the party there as to jeopardize the whole interests of the party in the State? That is what his control means. The time to answer the question is now. '96 is a Republican year; will the tried and true Republicans of Kent and Sussex join their party associates in New Castle for a victory next November? What shall the answer be?

FROM OLD SUSSEX.

An exchange says Sheriff Truxan, of Sussex county, has received from Spokane, Wash., news of the arrest of Collingswood P. Hallett who some twelve or fifteen years ago was convicted of the murder of a young man named David in Millford after a very dramatic trial in which he was defended by Chas. M. Cullen, Esq., now Associate Justice. When called up for sentence he assumed the role of a crazy man and experts were appointed to examine him. He was finally sentenced and one dark night just before the day of his execution he escaped. How he crawled through the little hole made in the wall we never saw. He was with the natives. His jailer was another murderer, a Negro preacher, under life sentence for killing his wife whose funeral he heard from the Church loft where he had secreted himself. Governor Reynolds turned the latter out when he was making jail deliveries and since then the Sheriff have had to hire turnkeys.
